

Andreas Lie

Andreas Lie is a modern day artist who uses photographs of an animals habitat, combined with an image of the animal itself. He uses this method of double of exposure to create his stunning pieces of photographic art.

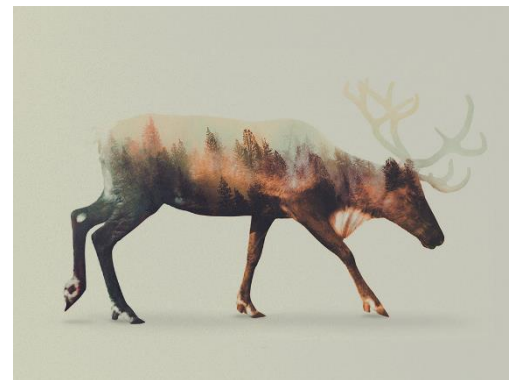

Why study Andreas Lie?

His unmistakable style, digital double exposure, means that bears and wolves blend with landscapes. The art reflects Andreas's deep appreciation for the wilderness of his Norwegian homeland.

Key facts

Full Name	Andreas Lie
Born	1990 in Bergen, Norway.
Life	Andreas Lie is a Norwegian born artist, who shot to fame with his pictures of the Norwegian wilderness.

If you look carefully at these pieces of art by Andreas Lie, you can see the two separate photographs he has used. For one layer Andreas use an image of the animals itself and for the other he uses an image of the animal's habitat. Andreas uses images of habitat destruction to raise awareness of the difficulties being faced by some of the animals.

Key Vocabulary

Photography - The creation of art using a camera.

Layers- when a sheet or other material covers an area. Andreas layers images on top of each other.

Double exposure- the layering of two photographic images.

